

7 Conclusion

Overall, it appears that in this County there are many effective coordination processes in place, some formal and some not. Most likely, the unique nature and extent of this County's development has required that these coordination measures be in place. It is anticipated though, that where improvements are needed, or additional coordination mechanisms are required, this Element will provide a guide for, and represent the County's commitment to, the ongoing collaboration and joint planning to achieve desired intergovernmental coordination goals.
